Easter Revision in Birmingham

3 April to 21 April 2023

MPW Birmingham has been delivering academic success at both GCSE and A level since 1980 and has for many years been rated 'Outstanding' by Ofsted across all areas of assessment. Part of the MPW group of colleges, MPW Birmingham is one of the country's best known independent fifth- and sixth-form colleges.

About MPW

MPW offers a broad range of subjects and has a tradition of expertise in intensive, exam-oriented tuition. It is this expertise which forms the basis of our Easter revision courses. Our courses are designed not only to consolidate knowledge and understanding but also to develop good question-answering skills and examination technique. We believe it is essential that our courses foster students' self-confidence and motivation which, in our experience, underpin both effective revision during the Summer term and strong academic performance in the actual examinations.

Why do an Easter Revision Course?

Final-year GCSE and A level students are largely now examined on all aspects of the course in a single exam sitting at the end of two years. Accordingly, it has never been more important for students to run through the key areas of the specification in a structured environment as part of their overall revision programme. With the Summer exam season starting in May, the Easter break is the ideal time for an intensive period of revision without any other distractions.

For Year 12 students who are not sitting public examinations this year, our separate Year 12 courses provide the perfect preparation for the end-of-year internal examinations that often determine a student's predicted grades when applying to universities later in the year.

Our Distinctive Approach to Tuition

Our tutors are highly qualified graduates with considerable teaching experience. Many are GCSE or A level examiners and are therefore attuned to the requirements and approaches demanded by the various examining boards.

Small classes are essential in order to provide the personalised attention that each student requires. All groups are limited to an absolute maximum of nine students, although the average is usually six or seven.

Students must expect to be worked hard for the duration of their courses and they are tested regularly. During the course each student will be given advice on the best way to revise in the final run-up to their examinations.

A Level Course Structure

For Year 12 and 13 students we run predominantly both board- and topic-specific courses as set out in the Course Outlines booklet which should be read alongside this brochure. The majority of courses are timetabled either in the mornings or afternoons for five days, thus allowing students to study up to two subjects in a given week.

GCSE Course Structure

The majority of GCSE courses are week-long, half-day courses, running from Monday to Friday and targeting the Summer examination series. For History and English Literature we offer half-day modules on historical periods or specific texts. Support for Year 10 students studying GCSE specifications is also available and can be discussed in more detail with the Course Director.

NCUK Course Structure *

The NCUK course will be pathway-specific and split in to Semester 1 and 2 content; Semester 1 will be morning sessions and Semester 2 in the afternoon. The programme has been designed to focus on both key topic areas and exam technique.

For further details about the courses please refer to our Course Outlines Booklet.

The college is able to offer tuition in a range of subjects and specialist areas in addition to those listed. Please contact us to discuss your precise requirements.
